

PICTURES

In Vol. XVD a number of photographic exhibits appear. On p.510 there are Commission exhibits 133-A, 133-B and 134; these also appear in the report on p.126, where in the accompanying text 133-B is described as the photograph of Oswald holding a rifle, the negative of which was also found. Exhibit 133-A is a similar photograph, not identical, of which no negative was found. These are undescribed in Vol. XVI. It is interesting to point out, especially in the light of Oswald's charge to the police of photographic fakery, that there was no enlargement of the one for which the negative was found. The enlargement of the one for which the negative was not found may or may not be of the found Mannlicher-Garcano rifle. It clearly does not have a telescopic sight on it.

Exhibits 354 and 365, pp.949 and 961, are aerial views of the Dealey Plaza, Book Depository area. The latter is somewhat clearer, but both are indistinct. However, it is clear from these photographs that there is no concrete abutment to the west of the steps from Zapruder could have taken his pictures unless it is completely buried in the trees. The design which is pretty clear would tend to eliminate such a structure.

On the rifle and pistol, other photographs appear on pp.510-14, including a view of an undischarged bullet for the rifle and two for the pistol, all undescribed except for caliber.

PICTURES

In Vol. XVD a number of photographic exhibits appear. On p.510 there are Commission exhibits 133-A, 133-B and 134; these also appear in the report on p.126, where in the accompanying text 133-B is described as the photograph of Oswald holding a rifle, the negative of which was also found. Exhibit 133-A is a similar photograph, not identical, of which no negative was found. These are undescribed in Vol. XVI. It is interesting to point out, especially in the light of Oswald's charge to the police of photographic fakery, that there was no enlargement of the one for which the negative was found. The enlargement of the one for which the negative was not found may or may not be of the found Mannlicher-Scarcano rifle. It clearly does not have a telescopic sight on it.

Exhibits 354 and 365, pp.949 and 961, are aerial views of the Dealey Plaza, Book Depository area. The latter is somewhat clearer, but both are indistinct. However, it is clear from these photographs that there is no concrete abutment to the west of the steps from Zapruder could have taken his pictures unless it is completely buried in the trees. The design which is pretty clear would tend to eliminate such a structure.

On the rifle and pistol, other photographs appear on pp.510-14, including a view of an undischarged bullet for the rifle and two for the pistol, all undescribed except for caliber.